

BETHUNE FOUND IN BUFFALO AND IS COMING HOME

Long Missing Lawyer Located in Up-State City Under Assumed Name.

Faneuil D. S. Bethune, the young New York lawyer who disappeared in August, was found to-day in Buffalo by relatives who have been searching for him. He was in a private house under an assumed name and has consented to return to New York, according to a telegram received this afternoon.

He will be brought back quietly in two or three days and will then undergo a course of treatment for nervous trouble, brought on by overwork. His wife, who has been in a state of collapse since her return from an unsuccessful search in Chicago last Friday, took a turn for the better when she learned that her husband had been found.

The discovery of Mr. Bethune follows closely upon the receipt by his wife of a special delivery letter written by him and mailed in Buffalo. The phraseology of the letter indicates that the writer was laboring under considerable mental excitement when it was written.

Mr. Bethune denounces the efforts that have been made to find him. He says the efforts of his wife and friends have been ridiculous in the extreme, and betrays a knowledge of their plans indicating that he has kept close watch upon them. He was particularly bitter concerning circulars which have been printed by the hundreds and scattered broadcast by the Pinkerton Agency.

"I will never be heard from again unless this foolish search is abandoned," writes the missing man. "I shall scan the newspapers to see if my request is granted. Stop all this sensational searching and advertising or I shall completely disappear."

In compliance with the demand in the letter, which was opened by Dr. Hansen, the Pinkerton Agency was immediately called off the case. A reward of $10,000 for information concerning the missing man was withdrawn, letters were sent out with instructions for the destruction of the circulars, and every attempt was made to carry out the wishes of Mr. Bethune.

SERVICE BOARD HAS A HEARING ON TRANSFERS

Receiver Robinson Tells Nothing More Has Been Done for 59th Street.

There was a hearing this afternoon before the Public Service Commission in the inquiry as to a joint rate over one or more lines of the Metropolitan Street Railway system and the Fifty-ninth street cross-town line, or, in other words, on what terms transfers could be exchanged between the two systems so as to pay both a reasonable profit.

Chairman Willcox presided. Douglas Robinson, one of the Metropolitan receivers, arrived early. The other receiver, Adrian H. Joline, was on the stand several days ago.

An imposing array of lawyers was on hand, including John G. Milburn, special counsel for the receivers; J. L. Quackenbush, general counsel for the receivers; George S. Coleman, general counsel, and Le Roy T. Harkness, of the law department of the commission. Mr. Robinson was called as the first witness.

Mr. Coleman asked him if he had considered the matter of arranging a joint rate since his conference with the cross-town officials. He said:

"I have given it considerable attention, and there are so many factors entering into the problem that it seems to me quite impossible to arrange a joint rate, without very carefully considering and weighing these various factors. These include cost of operation of all the properties, their appraisal and other matters. As I am not an expert I cannot say how long it would take to get to the bottom. But as the problem was presented to us, it appeared wholly impossible to average a joint rate at that time."

Has any appraisal been made since the receivers took charge?"

"There has not."

"Has any appraisal been made since such an appraisal?"

"No."

Mr. Coleman asked about the operation of the Twenty-eighth street and Twenty-ninth street cross-town lines, which the witness said had been continued until Oct. 1 by request. Witness could not tell whether the arrangement would be continued after that date.

Asked whether a four-cent rate could be made profitable to a company operating in Manhattan, the witness said that he was not a transit expert.

"I have learned what I could in the last ten months," he said, "but not enough to answer that question."

Sale of Odd Pieces of Furniture from the August Furniture Sale

THESE are chiefly one of a kind—odd pieces remaining from the special lots purchased for the August Furniture Sale. From your standpoint it makes no difference how many of a kind we have. You only need one sideboard or table. But from our standpoint the lack of numbers justifies a considerable sacrifice of price to win a quick clearance.
